

Breastfeeding, Work and Women's Health

We invite members of the ANU community with an interest in breastfeeding and women's health to join us for an event that celebrates Women's Health Week and progress on ANU's Breastfeeding Friendly Workplace accreditation. We also celebrate ANU's commitment to gender equity, family friendliness and building a healthy work and study environment.

Parents and new mothers are invited to indulge in some pampering or access expert advice between 12.15—12.45pm:

- ◇ Free massages provided by Pivotal Therapies
- ◇ HR advice on parental leave and returning to work
- ◇ ABA's qualified breastfeeding counsellors
- ◇ ANU childcare centre reps providing advice about returning to work, childcare and breastfeeding.
- ◇ Indulgent spot prizes

From 12.45pm, Australian experts will discuss issues relating to breastfeeding, work, and women's health and wellbeing. Speakers include:

- ◇ Associate Professor Lisa Amir, La Trobe University
- ◇ Associate Professor Susan Jordan, University of Queensland
- ◇ Professor Gabriele Bammer, ANU
- ◇ Professor Catherine Waldby, ANU
- ◇ Honorary Associate Julie Smith, ANU
- ◇ Megan Fox, Regional Representative, ABA

A light lunch will be served from 12.15pm.

Monday 2 September, 12.15—3pm

Finkel Lecture Theatre, John Curtin School of Medical Research

Registration: <https://www.eventbrite.com/e/breastfeeding-work-and-womens-health-event-tickets-69255351621>

Organised by the BFW accreditation taskforce team as part of the Supporting Breastfeeding at ANU Working Group and ANU Family Friendly Committee.

Supported by the Research School of Population Health, the Gender Institute, Pivotal Therapies, University House and ANU Sport.

