

An evening with Diane Bell

Professor Emerita

Science Matters: Where are the young women?

Tuesday 11 November 2014

6pm -9pm

National Press Club: National Circuit, Barton ACT

Women remain under-represented as research scientists. Why? Does it matter? For whom? Anthropologist Diane Bell invites us into a series of imagined conversations between our scientist foremothers and their contemporary sisters as they reflect on their practice, past, present, and future.

Diane Bell is Professor Emerita of Anthropology at The George Washington University, DC, USA, and Writer in Residence at Flinders University SA. After 17 years in senior academic positions in the USA, she returned to Australia in 2005, continued her work with the Ngarrindjeri of the Murray River, Lakes and Coorong, ran for the Federal seat of Mayo (SA) in 2008, and advocated for return of water to Murray-Darling Basin. An award winner author, Diane has written with passion and courage of matters concerning Aboriginal society, the law, religion, higher education, and the environment.
